(Last Updated – December, 2002)

Acknowledgments:

PhD At Syracuse University:

This book, although revised and re-written, is based upon my doctoral research. I wish to thank the following professors from Syracuse University who provided support and input during the PhD research that served as the foundation for this book:

John Thompson – for his assistance in accessing older references and for his encouragement when it was really needed.

Paul Salamone – for his initial support in my attempting “cutting edge” research and for his support throughout my initial years in the PhD program.

Jim Bellini – for his clear thinking and editorial support. He also stood by this difficult research project to the end.

Noreen Glover – for her pushing me to be more accurate with my words.

Fred Frohock – for his ideas on a reorganization of the chapter sequence leading to a new slant for the presentation and for his suggestion that this research could be viewed as “cutting-edge”.

Other Contributions:

Thanks to Leslie Glazer, Ph.D., for the many discussions on philosophy and hermeneutics and to our local librarian, Linda Hall, who put extra effort into locating obscure references.
